Coming Out of Hibernation

Reed Has Boston Gazette of 1770

Rollin Reed, manager of Ocean Beach branch Bank of America, this week had at the bank a copy of the Boston Gazette and Country Journal of Monday, March 12, 1770. This very old newspaper has been in the Reed family since it was published 166 years ago.

Highly interesting is the strife then carried on between the settlers of the new world who were chafing under British rule and tax. At a meeting of the householders of Roxbury, a few days before the paper was published, many resolutions were voted upon, then there is an historic document copied, which states that:

"At a meeting of the inhabitants of the town of Littleton, in the county of Middlesex, on Monday, March 5th, 1770, a committee was chosen to prepare certain votes to be passed by the town relating to the Importation of British goods, who after retiring a short time into a private room, returned and reported the following, which was unanimously voted:

"The previous Impositions the Inhabitants of the British Colonies have long suffered from their Mother Country, strongly claim their Attention to every legal Method for their Removal.

"We esteem the measure already proposed, viz. the withdrawing our Trade from England, both economical and effectual.

"WE do therefore vote,
"1. THAT we will not (knowingly) directly or indirectly, purchase any Goods which now are or hereafter may be mortgaged contrary to the Agreement of the Merchants of the Town of Boston.

"2. THAT if any inhabitant of the Town of Littleton shall be known to purchase any Article of any Importer of Goods contrary to the before-mentioned Agreement, or of any one who shall buy of any such Importer, he shall suffer our high Displeasure or Contempt.

"3. THAT a committee be chosen to inspect the Conduct of all Buyers and Sellers of Goods (if such there should be) who shall violate the true Spirit and Intention of the above-mentioned Votes and Resolutions.

"4. THAT we will not drink or purchase any foreign Tea, however Imported, until a general Importation of British Goods shall take Place."

Other towns of the Boston section have resolutions protesting "the acts of Parliament imposing Duties and Taxes, upon the inhabitants of North America."

The foregoing is all "front page" news of the old Boston Gazette and on the two inner pages is the detailed account of the "Boston Massacre," a fight between young men and British soldiers, where in Samuel Grey, Crispus Attucks, James Caldwell and Samuel Maverick were killed and quite a number injured, those wounded being named and their injury reported.

These pages are heavily bordered in black, with black column rules,

February Business Shows Fine Increase

Vast improvement in business is reported by authorities who have recently made announcement of progress for San Diego and the following report covers February sales and other information.

Retail Sales—Retail sales in San Diego during February were ahead of January and were substantially better than in February 1935, according to reports from local merchants. Collections also were reported greatly improved over last year.

Fisheries—The tuna pack so far this season is 33 per cent heavier than in the similar period of 1935 and sales of canned tuna are 35 per cent greater. The pack of mackerel also shows a large gain over 1935, totaling 20,000 cases as compared with 1,000 cases at this time last year.

Sardine fishermen report their catch practically double that of last year. The market for sardine meal and oils is exceptionally good.

Farm Income—Farm income in San Diego County during 1935 totaled $17,985,293, according to preliminary estimates compiled by the County Farm Bureau. This represents an increase of $5,063,531 or 39 per cent over 1934 and is $5,764,645 or 47 per cent greater than the 1933 total. Comparative figures for principal crops follow:

FEBRUARY BEVERAGE TAX IS $108,898.41

Sacramento, March 23—California's tax on beer and wine will total $108,898 for February, according to assessment figures released today by R. E. Collins, chairman of the State Board of Equalization.

February is usually the low month for the year in tax collections, Collins explained, although the total assessment this year was $15,278 in excess of February, 1935.

between columns and articles. In one column is shown the black caskets of the four murdered men with their initials and skulls and crossbones and other emblems.

This old newspaper is indeed a relic and most interesting in its entirety. Advertisements contained are quaint and unusual from present day inspection. Two of the advertisements read as follows:

RAN-A-WAY from his Master, John Langdon, the 20th of this instant February, an indentured servant lad of 14 years of age, named Abenezer Blancher. He had on when he went away, a Frock and Trousers, over a dark striped Homespun Jacket and Breeches, a striped cotton and linen shirt, shoes almost worn out, a pair of figured buckles, this country make. He is a smart ready boy and will tell a good plausible story. Whoever will take him up and bring him to his Master, shall be rewarded for his Trouble.

7 New Homes Started 1,000 More Needed

Men who have made a study of the housing situation in San Diego this week report that 3,000 family units are needed to take care of our ever increasing population. Point Loma, we believe, should have approximately 1,000 of these new homes, however, it takes considerable time to construct that many and a shortage will no doubt be felt for several years.

The head of the Consolidated Aircraft Co., made the statement Wednesday that employees of his company need 600 homes and that they are sub-letting work to eastern factories because workmen cannot find living accommodations here. His men though can pay only $15 to $25 per month rent.

During the past week quite a number of new building permits have been granted for Ocean Beach as follows:

Charles E. Remley, two California cottages and garages at 4965 W. Pt. Loma Blvd., $1100 each.

William Evans, California cottage, 818 San Jose place, $1,000.

Lawrence Kretzler, per P. M. Burrows, frame-stucco residence and garage, 1641 Cable street, $2,000.

Q. T. Amey, per Burrows, frame stucco residence and garage, 4526 Long Branch avenue, $2,750.

Julia Knox, frame residence and garage at 4673 Del Mar avenue to cost $1675.

Clara Rasmussen, frame residence and garage, 4665 Del Mar avenue to cost $1500.

SARAH B. BROOKS DIES SUDDENLY FROM STROKE

"Only happy when she was planning or serving for others" fittingly describes Mrs. Sarah B. Brooks, beloved wife of Edward H. Brooks, 2318 Monroe avenue, who passed away March 19th, after a stroke the day previous from which she could not recover.

Mrs. Brooks had a large circle of friends over the entire city of San Diego with quite a number here, and the editor's family have felt strongly her kindness since living near her home in 1928.

Funeral services were held Saturday under auspices of the Order of the Eastern Star and Rebekah lodges. She was also a member of the White Shrine and active in all the organizations.

Deceased was the mother of Ruth I. Gerson of Glendale, daughter of Judah Borovay of Chicago, sister of Sam Borovay of Milwaukee, two brothers in Chicago and Rose Kaplan of San Diego.

Sincerest sympathy is extended to the family in this sad and sudden bereavement.

DEEP SEA FISHERS MUST HAVE LICENSE

If you intend to go deep sea fishing this year don't forget to obtain the regular $2 sport fishing license good for both ocean and fresh water angling. The fee for non-residents is $3. Persons under eighteen years of age are not required to obtain a fishing permit.

The Division of Fish and Game defines the following as game fish and mollusks and makes it mandatory that those taking such carry necessary license: Tuna, yellowtail, marlin, broadbill, swordfish, jewfish or black sea bass, albacore, barracuda, bonita, rock bass, California whiting (also known as corbina and surf fish), yellowfin croaker, spotfin croaker, salmon, steelhead and other trout, charr, whitefish, striped bass, black bass, perch, crappie, calico bass, all varieties of sunfish, Pismo clams, cockles, and abalones.

Fishermen may obtain complete information regarding California's fish and game laws at auto club offices.

RESIDENT FOR TWENTY YEARS LAID AT REST

Funeral services were held Tuesday for James Henry Custer of 4712 Pescadero avenue, who died

Roller Skating Rink Will Open Tonight

Ocean Beach's new roller skating rink will open tonight, Friday evening about 7 p. m., March 27th, and young folks and old ones will be out for a gala time.

The old dance hall at the foot of Newport avenue, while in good condition generally, has had some new flooring added to enlarge the skating rink, and other improvements made. Redecorating has taken nearly 1,000 rolls of crepe paper and with a variety of colors the hall is a pretty sight.

Messrs. Ahrens and Hartman deserve the undivided support of pleasure loving folks in a clean and healthful exercise. They tell us none of the concessions in the building will be allowed to handle intoxicants and everything possible will be done to conduct a clean and orderly place of business.

Let's all go skating Friday night!

RUFUS CHOATE TELLS ABOUT HARBOR PLANS

Dr. Frank R. Felt presided at Kiwanis club luncheon Wednesday noon with Rollin Reed chairman of the day's program.

Rufus Choate, San Diego harbor commissioner was speaker for the day and gave a most interesting talk on past improvement of San Diego harbor as well as plans for the future. Mr. Choate said that plans as a rule were slow materializing, however, continued improvement had been accomplished. He said that the government department of rivers and harbors had approved a resurvey last April which plans went to Los Angeles and stayed there in that office, on account of rush of work, until December 1st, when they were forwarded to San Francisco. In January the project was forwarded to Washington and there thru the united efforts of Congressman Burnham, Navy officials and Mr. Choate, favorable action was taken, as a result of which 2 1/2 million yards of soil was now being dredged from the bay entrance and deposited as a part of North Island.

Further improvement contemplated includes filling in of 15 acres at Rosecrans from middle ground in the bay, dredging there to depth of 36 feet, and when present plans are completed the bay channel will be 1500 to 2500 feet wide, minimum depth 30 feet of water, and will allow for valuable additions to the Naval Training station, Marine Base, Lindbergh Field and other sections with a new boulevard to be constructed that will allow driving from Roseville to the lower end of National City, this will be in addition to the present dredging. Congress at present is being asked for $4,185,000 to carry out these plans.

The payroll of the Navy is estimated at $25,000,000, the fishing industry at $8,000,000 and the aircraft industry about $7,000,000. A total of $40,000,000 annually, all due to our harbor.

A bill was introduced March 23 in the U. S. Senate which it is hoped will do away with the present $2.50 arbitrary at present imposed on the port of San Diego and when this is corrected there will be a great deal more shipping done via San Diego.

R. C. Nelson, a charter member of Detroit Kiwanis club, was a visitor.

J. D. Conger and S. G. Horton were guests of A. V. Mutty and E. E. Follin, a guest of Heber Hartvigsen.

March 21. He was the husband of Beatrice Custer, son of Mrs. Florence Moore, brother of Mrs. Naomi Hesson and Mrs. Lottie Stewart of Ira Ann, Texas, and Sidney Custer of Colorado, Texas.

Mr. Custer was 49 years of age and has been highly regarded by old timers during his 20 years residence here at the beach.

School Board Dilatory Undersheriff Brereton To Speak at Forum

Directors of the Ocean Beach chamber of commerce met in regular session last Monday evening.

Mrs. Esther Wisdom, president of Ocean Beach PTA was heard in regard to Collier park being transferred to the City School Board and it was agreed that the chamber would continue their assistance in getting this matter to the voters. Mrs. Wisdom had on Monday received a letter from the city manager which stated "that there was no opposition to the transfer and it will and should be placed on the ballot at the earliest opportunity." It is regrettable that between the city manager's office and the school board that this has not been done months ago for it seems that the school board should have been interested enough in obtaining a tract of land worth $50,000 to $75,000 at very little cost.

However, it has not been done, and will not be done, unless continued effort is made by local people to see that their interests are looked after for this much needed project.

A committee who had consulted the city manager in regard to life guards at the beaches, has been promised that a guard would be stationed here during the Easter vacation but that a regular guard could not be employed until later.

The secretary was instructed to write letters asking that the beach be cleaned of dry kelp at once, also to the San Diego chamber of commerce suggesting a road sign be placed at Gila Bend cut-off to Tucson stating the San Diego highway was 70 miles closer to the Pacific coast than the Phoenix and L. A. route.

A number of other matters came before the board for communication and support which were all of vital interest to the north shore area.

LOWNES BUY SUSAN REINFRANK HOME

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Lownes, this week, purchased the Susan Reinfrank home at 4906 Brighton Ave.

Since Mrs. Reinfrank has been living in Beverly Hills she decided to dispose of her property here.

DIRIGIBLE FACTORY MAY LOCATE HERE

Possibility of a new aviation industry for San Diego was foreseen this week when it was learned that Thad Rose, president of the Rose Lighter Than Air Corp. of Van Nuys, is seeking near here a 200-acre tract on which to establish a factory for construction of a new-type dirigible which Rose has patented. Rose said he has received a patent for ship, and that his company is ably financed.

"Finger Printing and Other Modern Identification Methods" will be ably discussed by Undersheriff George Brereton of the San Diego county sheriff's office at the Social-Civic forum Tuesday night, March 31, at 7:30 p. m. held in the Ocean Beach elementary school.

Brereton has been most active in furthering the plan for universal finger printing in San Diego, and as a trained and experienced peace officer, he speaks with authority on the values of this practice. He not only has made penology a study in leading universities of the west, but has taught in college and has made many friends with the experts in the field of his chosen profession, including such men as August Vollmer.

According to John R. Lyons, forum leader, the group attending the Tuesday night forum is growing and seems delighted with the opportunity of coming to know leaders of thought and action in San Diego and also appreciates the full unthwarted chance to speak out their own ideas and have them refined, rejected or approved by their fellow forum attendants.

The address given by Undersheriff Brereton is sponsored by Paul Klein and Dr. Charles J. Falk, directors of adult education in the San Diego city schools. The forum is free to the public.

FEBRUARY GASOLINE TAX IS $3,524,148.27

Sacramento, March 23—A steady increase in the state gasoline tax was again shown for February, 1936, with a 15.6 per cent increase over the tax assessed in February, 1935. Richard E. Collins of Redding, chairman of the State Board of Equalization made this announcement here today.

Assessments totaling $3,524,148.27 were made against California gasoline companies for February, an increase of $478,911.20 for the same month in 1935, according to Collins.

HIGH TIDES TRAP BOYS AT SUNSET CLIFFS

Two youths narrowly escaped being trapped by a rising tide in a cave beneath Sunset Cliffs, Sunday. A woman who had parked her auto at a point above the place overheard their conversation and notified the Ocean Beach police, who, with Ocean Beach fire company lowered ropes to the pair and pulled them to safety.

The two young men rescued were Melvin Reynolds, 20, 4203 Forty-fourth St., and Van Lee, 20, 4172 First Ave. They were given first aid treatment at police emergency hospital for shock and bruises.

France Forming Solid Front Against Germany in New Crisis—Paraguay Made Totalitarian State—
Chester Davis Is Sent to Europe.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SIXTY thousand German troops in the Rhineland that was supposed to be demilitarized. Practically the entire French army in and behind the vast system of fortifications along France's eastern frontier. The French government, backed by the other signers of the violated Locarno treaty and by the little entente, Poland and Russia, demanded that Germany withdraw her troops from the Rhineland or that sanctions, economic and possibly military, be imposed by the League of Nations.

M. Flandin

Great Britain trying hard to keep the peace, reproving Germany, supporting the French demands in great measure, but urging that Hitler's proposal of new non-aggression pacts be given consideration. Reichsfuehrer Hitler reviewing his forces in the re-occupied territory and receiving the loud plaudits of the inhabitants for restoring their military sovereignty.

That in a nutshell was the perilous situation in Europe as the representatives of the Locarno nations and the council of the league assembled in London to consider what to do next. Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin of France was there with the full support of Premier Sarraut for his demands that immediate action be taken to bring Hitler to time. He was represented as "almost convinced" that a "preventive war" now would be preferable to "a carnage two years hence," and in Paris it was disclosed that France counted on having at her disposal, from her own forces and those of Russia, Poland and the little entente, a potential army of about 40,000,000 men. It was said 8,000,000 could be mobilized in 48 hours and 31,000,000 were trained reserves; and that 8,000 airplanes and a million tons of warships were ready.

The Franco-Russian treaty came up in the French senate and was ratified by a huge majority. It is this pact that Hitler gave as his excuse for remilitarizing the Rhineland, asserting that it was a violation of the Locarno treaty, being aimed at Germany. It is the final link in the "iron ring" around the reich which France has been forging.

At first the British government's response to France's demands for full support against Germany was ambiguous and not satisfactory to Sarraut and Flandin. After conferences with Prime Minister Baldwin and other ministers, Capt. Anthony Eden, the young foreign secretary, appeared before the house of commons and declared any attack on France or Belgium in violation of the Locarno pact would compel Britain to go to their assistance. He added, however, that there was no reason to suppose "the present German action implies a threat of hostilities." Then he indicated Britain was willing to consider Hitler's proposals for new peace covenants.

The British statesmen seemed so calm in the crisis that there was reason to believe they knew in advance what Hitler intended to do. When Flandin and the other Locarno signatory representatives arrived in London, the attitude of the British cabinet changed and grew decidedly stiffer.

HITLER was not represented at either the Locarno conference or the session of the league council in London. He himself, having precipitated the crisis, made his triumphant appearance in the Rhineland and then awaited events. His dramatic and sudden denunciation of the Locarno treaty was accomplished in a speech before the reichstag and in formal announcements to the ambassadors in Berlin of the nations concerned. He asserted that the troops he sent into the Rhineland comprised a "symbolic" army only, and that the reich, while ready to defend itself, was wholly desirous of peace. To prove this he offered a plan which includes: A demilitarized strip of German, French and Belgian land; a 25-year non-aggression treaty among Germany, France and Belgium; with Great Britain and Italy as guarantors; inclusion of the Netherlands in the system of pacts; an air pact with the western powers; a non-aggression pact with Germany's eastern neighbors, including Lithuania; and return of Germany to the League of Nations after her sovereignty is established and her sovereignty restored.

France's reply to this was that, having just violated one treaty, Hitler could not be trusted to observe another; and anyway, France would not even listen to the reichsfuehrer's new proposals until he had withdrawn his troops from the Rhineland. The French army was moved toward the frontier and the "Maginot line" of fortifications and underground passages was fully manned. This system of defenses has been criticized because it requires so many troops that the army is rendered virtually stationary—what has been called in Paris "the concrete army." Remaining forces would be insufficient for offensive movement. But this fault might be disregarded if France gets the expected millions of soldiers from her allies.

CHIEF JUSTICE ALFRED A. WHEAT of the District of Columbia Supreme court checked the telegram-seizing activities of the Black senate committee on lobbying. He granted the Chicago law firm of Silas H. Strawn an injunction restraining the Western Union Telegraph company from giving the committee copies of the firm's telegrams.

The judge said the subpoena served on the telegraph company by the committee, calling for copies of telegrams "goes way beyond" the committee's powers.

Next day William Randolph Hearst, newspaper publisher, began a fight in court to keep an original confidential telegram out of the hands of the Black committee, and the American Newspaper Publishers' association denounced the reported seizure of that telegram, which was to one of Mr. Hearst's editors. The association advised any other editor, should he learn of similar action, to consult counsel and "take vigorous steps to protect his constitutional rights."

COL. RAFAEL FRANCO, who became provisional president of Paraguay after the recent revolution there, has set up a totalitarian government modeled after German Nazism and Italian Fascism. He issued a decree which declared the state and the "liberating revolution" of February 17 as indivisible and banned for one year political, labor, or other unions which "do not emanate explicitly from the state."

Paraguay, the government asserted, will be purged of "endemic, demagogic, industrial, and sectarian evils." The official statement places in the "liberating army" the principal source of authority.

The aims of the new government, the decree said, will be the construction of a new, strong Paraguay and constitutional reorganization for a future republic.

CHESTER C. DAVIS, head of the invalidated AAA, is not going to administer the soil conservation program devised as a substitute. President Roosevelt announced that Mr. Davis would leave soon on a trip to Europe to make a special study for the government of economic conditions bearing on the agricultural plans for this country. Critics of the administration immediately assumed that Mr. Davis and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace had disagreed and that the former was being gently edged out of the picture. This Mr. Wallace warmly denied, asserting there had been no friction and that he had deep affection for Mr. Davis and the sincerest respect for his ability and integrity.

In announcing the assignment, Mr. Roosevelt said: "In requesting him to make this study for our government, Secretary Wallace and I have had in mind the distinguished service Mr. Davis has given American agriculture, especially during the last two and one-half years. As administrator he has been directing governmental efforts which, to a considerable degree, were made necessary by changes in the European outlets for American farm products.

"Information to be gathered by him at close hand as to the precise nature and extent of these economic changes abroad is expected to assist greatly in developing American farm programs."

POWERS of the federal trade commission to investigate unfair trade practices will be greatly broadened by the Wheeler bill approved by the senate interstate commerce committee. It is vigorously opposed by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, the National Association of Manufacturers and the American Newspaper Publishers' association. The measure would: Make "deceptive acts and practices in commerce" unlawful in addition to "unfair methods of competition" specified in existing law.

Expressly give the commission authority to proceed "upon its own initiative," as well as that of the President, or either house of congress as now provided.

Include persons and partnerships as well as corporations within the scope of the commission's authority to investigate business practices and conditions in interstate and foreign commerce. Redefine "documentary evidence" to include "books of account, financial and corporate records," and make such records subject to commission subpoena.

COMMUNISTS and radicals who appeared as representatives of the Workers' Alliance of America went before WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins and made a series of demands that were all coldly turned down by that gentleman. These included the dismissal of Victor F. Ridder, New York WPA director; no cut in the 3,500,000 persons on works relief, and full union pay and union hours for persons on relief and pay for sick leave. They also demanded that all employed, whether or not on relief rolls, be given WPA work.

IN RECENT financing operations the government sold $1,355,643,550 in bonds and notes, according to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. The offerings, largest since the Victory bond issue of 1919, were heavily oversubscribed by banks. This borrowing brings the public debt up to the record figure of $31,413,000,000. The treasury's cash balance is increased to $2,675,000,000.

The funds will finance New Deal spending in the near future, partially defray bonus costs and retire $450,000,000 worth of treasury bills falling due March 16.

PLANS to furnish TVA power to the city of Knoxville, Tenn., under a project to be financed with PWA funds were blocked by a temporary restraining order issued by the District of Columbia Supreme court.

The order was granted on the petition of the Tennessee Public Service company which contended its $4,000,000 investment in Knoxville would be rendered practically worthless, if the government brought cheaper power into the city.

Also in the District Supreme court, 66 producers of soft coal attacked the Guffey coal control act as unconstitutional in its entirety on the ground that it invades the rights of the states and deprives producers of their property without due process of law.

KOKI HIROTA, former foreign minister, formed a new ministry for Japan and submitted the names to the emperor. He, besides being premier, takes the foreign minister's portfolio. Lieut. Gen. Count Juichi Taramchi is put in as minister of war and Admiral Osami Nagano as minister of navy. Military leaders insisted that Hirota "show a proper recognition of the gravity of the times and the necessity for renovation of Japanese foreign policy," and to this demand he yielded somewhat.

Hirota issued a statement saying that "the present empire situation requires independent and positive readjustment of our foreign relations in order to liquidate this emergency."

Hachiro Arita, new Japanese ambassador to China, told the press in Shanghai that "it is fundamental that China recognizes Manchukuo and that the other North China questions should be settled on the spot."

"There has been no change in Japanese policy in China as a result of the recent Tokyo incident," he declared. "Japan will carry out the three principles of Koki Hirota, former Japanese foreign minister, requiring that China eliminate anti-Japanism, co-operate economically with Japan and Manchukuo and co-operate in the elimination of communism within China and along the borders."

LIEUT. ROBERT K. GIOVANNOLI of Lexington, Ky., hero of the spectacular bombing plane crash during army tests at Dayton, Ohio, last October, was killed in a crackup of his army plane at Logan field, Baltimore. Giovannioli's single seated pursuit plane lost its right wing coming out of a glide and hurtled down in a crazy spin from an altitude of less than 500 feet. It rolled over after hitting the landing field and was demolished.

JAMES J. FARLEY, chairman of the Democratic national committee, let it be known that the party chiefs would make no effort to keep Al Smith out of the national convention in Philadelphia if he is elected a delegate and presents proper credentials. And once he is seated, there will be no attempt to keep him from speaking his mind. Administration leaders, it was represented, believe Mr. Roosevelt will dominate the convention so completely that no attack by Smith or anyone else on the New Deal can have any considerable effect.

Uncommon Sense By John Blake

Fashions have always been a mystery to me.

Fashions

When, almost over night, I discover that men and women are practically all appearing in costumes which differ widely from those that they were wearing a year ago, I never fail to be astonished.

But why not? As well go through the world thinking in the same way as dressing in the same way.

And if, from Adam's day we had continued to think in the same way we should still be using the leaves from the trees for clothes and trying to support ourselves on the fruit that grew on their branches.

For years the city of New York was a succession of brown stone or granite buildings, all of them pretty much alike, and only a very few modeled on Greek architectural ideas.

Then the island became so crowded that there was not room for expansion in any direction but upward.

Upward the city grew. Great and beautiful sky scrapers were planned and built, and now the sky line of the American metropolis is one of the wonders of the world.

Following close on fashions in business structures came a change of building fashions in little towns and cities.

These, when they followed the old colonial styles imported from England, were at first beautiful enough.

But they soon changed to the mansard roof and to a bad imitation of the Queen Ann cottage, till by and by the country was belted by monstrosities that blighted the landscape.

Sometimes we overdo it. I read in a newspaper the other day that cooked rice is now served in colors to match the scheme of the hostess who wants to be modern in entertaining her guests.

And I notice in the food stores that the packages of edibles of various kinds, once hideous and uninviting, have become things of beauty, which are far more attractive to the eyes of purchasers.

I am told that fashions in education are now shifting constantly, probably to keep match with the fashions in religion that are observable almost everywhere.

And men and women, with the whole past of the world from which to choose, are constantly making their world more beautiful.

On a coastal steamboat the other afternoon I sat behind two obviously prosperous men who were talking about

The Best Investment

Inasmuch as they took their seats by the rail not far from mine I did not feel like an eavesdropper while I listened to them.

One of them was saying, when I sat down:

"I am going to set aside safely enough money for Bill to live on. I will put it in trust, so he can get only the interest from it, and that ought to be enough to keep him."

"In these days you never can tell what may happen, and I don't want him to go hungry if there comes another financial upset in the country."

"I think," said the other man, "that that is the worst thing you can do. If your boy is like the average boy, that investment will give him such a feeling of security that he will never step out and do anything for himself. How much of an investment did you have to start with?"

The other man grinned: "About forty dollars."

"Paid my tuition for the first year in a little inland college. But of course I had to work my way through for the other three years."

"And now you're pretty well fixed, as I happen to know. Why don't you give the kid forty or fifty dollars, and tell him to try to live on it for a month and see what happens?"

"The poor youngster would starve."

"Not if he knew that was all he was going to get from you. A little money won't do him any good. If you would give him a fortune, he might learn how to take care of it, and be able to carry on when you passed out. But he probably wouldn't. The best investment you can make for that boy is an education to start with—a business education—and then leave him to his own devices. If he has got the right stuff in him he will get by. But if he knows that he will have plenty of money he will begin figuring out how to spend it, even before he gets hold of it, and that won't do him any good."

"Times have changed," said the father of the boy. "Youngsters need more money to start with than they used to."

"That's nonsense. On the East side of New York, and everywhere for that matter there are boys who are making their way on no capital at all, and some of them will some time be among the big and successful business men of this country."

"I'd hate to have my kid have to buck the world with what he can learn in a college."

"If he's that kind of a kid, don't send him to college. But if he's the right kind, he'll get along. But he'll never get along if you tell him he won't need to work."

"Much better."

"What did you do for it?"

"Got her a new hat."

The Best Way

A doctor was called in to see a very testy and irritable patient.

"Well, sir, what's the matter?"

"That," growled the patient, "is for you to find out."

"I see," said the doctor, thoughtfully. "Well, if you'll excuse me for an hour or so I'll go along and fetch a friend of mine—a vet. He's the only chap I know who can make a diagnosis without asking questions."

Wouldn't Chance It Again

"You never told me, dear," said Mrs. Jones, "what was your real reason for giving up drinking?"

"Well," said the husband, after some hesitation, "it was like this. The last time I came home tight your mother was here. I saw two of her and the shock cured me."—Stray Stories Magazine.

The General Demonstration

"Opportunity," said the ready-made philosopher, "knocks at every man's door."

"Yes," replied Mr. Growcher; "but there is so much knocking going on these days that it's hard to make distinctions."

the lady with a note book.

"No," answered Mr. Dustin Stax. "I am the master of my fate up to a certain extent, but I'd never get to a party if my wife didn't tie my necktie for me."

Pea-Shooters as Dueling Weapons Was Twain's Idea

Mark Twain once found himself a second in a duel and it was up to him to suggest the weapons to be used.

His first suggestion was pea-shooters at a mile's distance. But as nobody would get hurt they wouldn't know how the duel came out. The next suggestion, axes at one foot's distance and ruled out as altogether too serious. Eventually he got them to accept small pistols at a comparatively great distance.

TALL TALES

The Faithful Crutches

MOST people know about the loyalty of dogs and other dumb animals that serve mankind, but they do not realize that inanimate things are frequently just as faithful. So says Herbert Sharples of Montreal, Que., who tells this touching story of the faithful crutches.

One day he saw a traveling doctor in the market place offering for sale a marvelous salve which, he claimed, would cure all ills. One of the first purchasers was a man whose legs were so shriveled and twisted that he had to use crutches to get along. One minute and eight seconds after he had rubbed some of the salve on his legs they were so straight and strong that he cast away his crutches and started to walk home without them.

The doctor, having no use for the salve left in the box by the man, and noticing that the crutches were very dingy from long use, began rubbing some of the ointment on them to see if it would brighten them up. At once the crutches began to dance and caper around him, stopping now and then to admire each other's bright, shiny appearance.

Suddenly they paused in their antics and the next moment they were trotting gaily down the street until they caught up with their former master. After that they walked sedately at his heels, ready to come to his assistance if need be, even though he had cast them off without a single thought.

Victims of Imagination

JOSEPH THOMPSON, of Nashville, Tenn., who gets around the country quite a bit in his work for a railroad, is seldom surprised by the queer things that folks do—like putting tacks in a dining car meal, eating them and threatening to sue the carrier.

The reason Joe preserves his calm is that once he operated a farm and most everybody knows that the queerest sort of things are forever happening there.

Joe's plantation featured fine hams and a herd of nervous goats but he still likes to talk about his trials and tribulations with a patch of popcorn. "Never had any decent luck with the popcorn," Joe testifies. "Gets hot as blazes down at Nashville and first thing you'd know my field would begin to pop and I'd lose practically everything I'd put into it. Don't suppose I ever got to market more than half a crop."

"What I finally did was to plant the popcorn at a spot very close to the house. The noise of its popping kept the children amused and sometimes they would be quiet for hours, just listening to the cheery noise of the popping corn."

"One time, though, the whole field began to pop at the same time. The white pellets flew into the air in a thick cloud and fell in the pasture with my nervous goats. Eighteen of the goats thought it was snowing and lay down and froze to death."

The Unfinished Story

CHARLES M. WALKER tells tall tales because of silent hours with feeding sheep in the Big Horn mountains of Wyoming. But, strangely enough, his favorite yarn concerns the heart of Chicago instead of the great open spaces.

"In 1928," Charlie tells, "downtown Chicago had numerous banks and many bank vice presidents. Despite their numbers, however, some of the latter were obsessed of self-importance. It is of one of these I sing."

"He lived fashionably on the north shore, commuting daily to the loop. One crisp morning he discovered the family cat dead at his back door. It was only 18 paces to a small garden but the banker revolted at being seen burying a cat. He wrapped the carcass in oiled paper, intending to cast it into the Chicago river which he always crossed downtown."

"Two friends joined him at the river's edge, which meant that the parcel was cached in an empty safe deposit box at the bank."

"Homeward bound, the banker retrieved his demise animal, planning quick interment on recrossing the river. Once again, however, friends accompanied him. He boarded a crowded train, placed his ghastly parcel in a luggage rack."

"At his station, the banker seized a brown-paper parcel and bolted. Swallowing pride, he decided on burial in the garden. But when he opened the parcel there was revealed a T-bone steak which an unknown but soon-to-be-shocked commuter had selected."

Mystery Springs in Queensland
Fifty miles southeast of Boulia township, in the far west of Queensland, are two mystery springs. One, known as Elizabeth spring, consists of a circular hole four or five feet in diameter in which tepid water is continually bubbling up and overflowing. The water, which is perfectly clear, is peculiar in that the human body cannot sink in it owing solely to the force of the water bubbling up from below. About 50 yards away is another called Lubra spring. Its water is always icy cold and is jet black. The human body sinks like a stone in it. According to the aborigines of the locality, the water in this spring turned black ages ago when a lubra (native woman) jumped into it and was never seen again.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

LIGHTFOOT MAKES A SHOCKING FIND

THE game of hide and seek between Lightfoot the Deer and the beautiful stranger whose dainty footprints had first started Lightfoot to seeking her had been going on for several days and nights when Lightfoot found something which gave him a shock. He had stolen very softly down to the Laughing Brook hoping to surprise Miss Daintyfoot, for that was her name, drinking there. She wasn't there.

"He Had Come Here to Seek That Beautiful Stranger I Have Been Hunting For," Muttered Lightfoot.

Lightfoot wondered if she had been there, so looked in the mud at the edge of the Laughing Brook to see if there were any fresh prints of those dainty feet. Almost at once he discovered fresh footprints. They were not the prints he was looking for. No, sir, they were not the dainty prints he had learned to know so well. They were prints very nearly the size of his own big ones, and they had been made only a short time before.

The finding of those prints was a dreadful shock to Lightfoot. He understood instantly what they meant. They meant that a second stranger had come into the Green Forest, a stranger with antlers like his own. Jealousy took possession of Lightfoot the Deer; jealousy that filled his heart with rage. "He has come here to seek that beautiful stranger I have been hunting for," muttered Lightfoot. "He has come here to try to steal her away from me. He has no right here in my Green Forest. He belongs back up on the Great Mountain from which he must have come, for there is no other place he could have come from. That is where that beautiful stranger must have come from, too. I want her to stay, but I must drive this fellow out. I'll make him fight. That's what I'll do; I'll make him fight. I'm not afraid of him, but I'll make him fear me."

Lightfoot stamped his feet, and with his great antlers thrashed the bushes as if he felt that they were the enemy he sought. Could you have looked into his great eyes then you would have found nothing soft about them. They became almost red with anger. Lightfoot quivered all over with rage. The hair on the back of his neck stood up. Lightfoot the Deer looked anything but gentle then.

After he had vented his spite for a few minutes on the harmless, helpless bushes he threw his head high in the air and whistled angrily. Then he leaped over the Laughing Brook and once more began to search through the Green Forest. But this time it was not for the beautiful stranger with the dainty feet. He had not time to think of her now. He must first find this newcomer, and he meant to waste no time in doing it.

DUTCH WIVES

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I LIKE the portraits of Dutch wives: A picture here and there survives That shows them with unpainted faces,
And modest dress, and other graces. And always at their waists they wore A key to household gate and door,
That gave their garb the added beauty Of their authority and duty.

A bunch of keys still woman wears, But keys quite different from theirs: A latchkey for a late home-coming (It's quite a lark, this going slumming). This the garage, and these the car, Yes, keys that do not bolt and bar, Their only keys forever showing Some way to leave, some means of going.

I often weary of the praise Of these the new and better days Of looser ties and lighter duties. I like to feast upon the beauties Of old Dutch wives who wore their keys Like queens their crowns, old memories Of old Dutch wives who thought the making Of home life's dearest undertaking. © Douglas Malloch—WNU Service.

Woman's Mind Faster Than Man's, Says Fencing Master

Crossing swords with a quick-witted woman is dangerous business, says Capt. Jean St. Maurice, fencing expert. He points out that a woman's mind works a fraction of a second faster than a man's, "and, with rapiers crossed, it's the split seconds that count."

The weaker sex can hold its own in fencing, he says, for "it's the only sport that depends on brain rather than brawn."

"CAVALLERIA RUSTICANA" AND THE WPA

People who have thought slightly of government sponsored musical projects should have been present last Friday and Saturday evening at the production of Mascagni's prize opera "Cavalleria Rusticana" at the Savoy theatre in San Diego. They would have been amazed at the wonderful talent shown there by the Federal Philharmonic orchestra and the solo and chorus productions. The whole evening's performance received the highest praise from those fortunate enough to gain a seat to the theatre as well as from the best music critics of the city.

The federal music project has been formed now for more than a year, starting with Conductor Larkin's band which gives concerts in Balboa park every Sunday to thousands of people, then later an orchestra was formed and singing classes were also arranged for people who were talented in that line.

The costumes for the production at the Savoy last Friday and Saturday were made by workers of the sewing project and the hundred people taking part made a splendid showing in their old fashioned colorful costumes.

In our estimation the music project is just as important as many of the public work projects and we firmly believe should be continued indefinitely for it adds to the culture of our nation and the well being of hundreds who would find it difficult to adapt themselves to any other means of livelihood.

Edwin Skedden, district co-ordinator of San Diego and Orange counties, is to be congratulated on his choice of members for the cast and the successful manner in which the opera is being produced.

FARMERS, THE FLOWER OF THE LAND

This is the time of year when the Back-to-the-Soil bug afflicts many city folks. This is a good omen for the welfare of the country, and could be the base for making better times and bringing contentment with a happy independence to thousands. There is potential need of development of more farm land, especially in California. The "back-to-the-land" idea is one of our most vital subjects, in fact it is a burning issue today; not only in the Golden State but the whole nation. This national idea casts a welcome, economic sunshine on the corn rows, the cotton stalks and the wheat fields, which mean sustenance to probably one-fourth of America.

Only a few years ago the farmer population was being depleted by an exodus to the cities, the trend has seemingly taken a turn, and now urban lovers are going into rural areas for a living and sustenance. This is as it should be, for it speaks well for the future of agriculture and a self-supporting citizenship. It is natural that people should win their living from the land. And the great progress made in developing more scientific farming methods is immeasurably improving the farmers' opportunity to till the soil at a profit.

California affords abundant inducement for, not only ranching, but extensive gardening and "small farming". There is a diversified list for him to follow which not only furnishes plenty of profitable employment, but his conditions are always improving with an income that few may not realize. We live in a fortunate age, even in the midst of depressing times. We have, here in California, fresh fruits and vegetables the year 'round. You can not beat it anywhere; also good schools and buses at the door for taking children, some miles to school from home.

The back to the farm movement is causing a great many people to pause and think, and once you get the people to thinking along the line of the small farm where one can make a living and be independent, it becomes a fascinating, pleasant and golden opportunity for performing miracles on a few acres of land. But the biggest lesson that is learned, coming from the city, is that country life is more than a way of earning a living. This is why and what makes the farmer's life the best.

There are some appalling conditions in Europe and Asia, but Russia however, seems to be slowly but steadfastly building a foundation of stability. Russia, eventually will learn that Democracy is absolutely dependent on Christian education. A republic can not exist for long half ignorant and half cultured; neither can you burn books of learning, especially the Bible, nor throttle the press nor muzzle the pulpit. Under such a rule a republic gradually disintegrates rather than thrives, but there is hope for Russia. Even though for years education and Christianity have been a prey to foreign demagogues and foes, under the banner of civilization, the school bell must become the tocsin of freedom, and the torch of knowledge must be kept burning to light the way of every free people.

Some people are said to be born lucky, yet there is an old saying, "Luck is a side-partner to honesty and hard work." The person of today who is well furnished, is the one who is lucky; for he has discovered the technique of self-mastery as a source of inexhaustible vitality. This alone is luck for anyone. It is the backing of a fortune already earned and fits one for expanding into such efficiency that wealth will come bringing with it contentment, ease, joy and happiness. Charles Dickens was considered a lucky man; he began life by pasting labels on boxes of blacking in a boot-black parlor. He became one of the greatest novelists in history. But we can not all become a Dickens! However there is the principle which anyone can see and know what constitutes a lucky man.

The school bus is one of the most tangible benefits known to modern education. Children and adult pupils little realize what a bonanza they enjoy. Some of the oldest cars think back and recall early school-day hardships from long distances trudged daily, rain or shine, sleet or snow, in order to acquire an education, then known as the "district" school. Nowadays, some 2,500,000 rural children are transported by bus to approximately 24,000 consolidated schools.

Respectful tribute to Pete W. Ross was paid by Lomans as a bugler sounded "taps". Faculty and student body alike were saddened by his passing.

Clarence R. Swenson, principal of the school which opened 10 years ago with Mr. Ross at its head, recalled the acts of kindness for which the former principal was noted.

"He endeared himself to us all. Never a week passed without his visiting Point Loma," said Swenson. "Ross Field, the new athletic field was dedicated to Pete W. Ross to show the high respect in which the students held him. In public schools such an attitude is rather unusual, showing that Pete Ross had that exceptional quality of administering wisely and sympathetically, thus retaining the respect and affection of all associated with him. He holds the same place in the hearts of all Lomans as the head of some old, well-established college. Pete Ross was a personality."

Martha Dahl, honor graduate of the class of '35, is in the spot light again. She's the proud and probably grateful owner of a handsome black "Seeing Eye" Shepherd dog. Martha has always been able to get around with the help of friends, but "Patsy" makes her independent.

Twenty-five dollars from the scholarship and student aid fund was voted by the Point Loma High school cabinet, toward the expense incurred by Martha in getting this dog. Some anonymous donations had been made by citizens. The Student Council hopes this will start the ball rolling for others who wish to aid this splendid girl who has refused to be beaten. They know money is needed to help her continue her education. Martha hopes to be able to study for a profession already claiming her interest.

Interesting History Of California Counties

Believing that the thousands of tourists who annually motor over the state's great highway system would like to know how the counties they visit came by their names, Director of Public Works Earl Lee Kelly, at the request of Governor Frank P. Merriam, has had prepared from state records a series of brief stories of the origin and meaning of the names of the counties of California including a few salient facts about each county.

—Editor.

Tulare County—Created April 20, 1852. Commandante Pages, while hunting for deserters in 1773, discovered a great lake surrounded by marshes and filled with rushes, which he named Los Tules (the tules, Scripus lacustris). In 1813, Captain Moraga on his exploring passed thru the valley of this lake, and named it "Valle de los Tules" (valley of the tules), from which this county took its name.

Home of the great Sequoia and General Grant national parks and Mount Whitney, whose summit is the highest point in the United States, Tulare also is noted as one of the wealthiest farming counties in the nation. Approximately 100,000 acres are planted to deciduous fruits and grape vines. Kaweah, Tule and Kern rivers and Deer Creek furnish abundant water for irrigation and have been harnessed for generation of electric power.

The raisin is Tulare's outstanding crop with peaches, olives, prunes, figs, plums, apricots and walnuts in the order named. About 1,193,000 acres are given over to farming, making Tulare rank sixth in the State. It is second in acreage irrigated.

Sequoia Park, or California Big Trees, attracts thousands of tourists. It covers 604 square miles and has twelve beautiful groves of redwoods, among which is the Giant Forest of 3200 acres containing 500,000 stately trees, 5000 of which measure more than ten feet in diameter. The General Sherman redwood is the largest living thing on earth, and next to the General Grant, a giant sequoia in Fresno county, the oldest thing on earth. There is as much lumber in this tree as can be obtained from 20 acres of average California pine forest; enough to erect 40 five-room homes. A train of 30 cars would be required to transport the trunk alone.

From the top of Mount Whitney an awe-inspiring panorama of mountain peaks, the Devil's Amphitheater, redwood groves and Death Valley, 300 feet below sea level, is revealed. Allensworth, noted for its grain, alfalfa, cotton and vegetables; Cutler and Orosi, with their raisins, grapes, oranges and lemons; Dinuba, center of the Alta Irrigation District; Exeter, great agricultural district; Lindsay and Porterville in the orange belt; Springville, gateway to mountain resorts, and Tulare, great valley shipping point, all add to the wealth and fame of Tulare county. Visalia, the charming county seat, founded in 1853 by Nathaniel Vise, bear hunter, is noted for its attractive homes. Population: 77,442. Area: 4856 square miles.

Tuolumne County—Created February 18, 1850. This is one of the original twenty-seven counties. "Tuolumne" is a corruption of the Indian word "Talmalamne," which signifies "stone houses or caves," the same as the word Shasta, but in another language. This was the name of a large tribe of Indians who lived on both sides of the river now bearing that name, from which the county derived its patronymic.

Located in the mountains and foothills of the Sierra Nevada range, Tuolumne is one of the five counties of the Mother Lode, which has produced more than $607,000,000 in gold. Tuolumne, alone, has contributed in excess of $112,000,000. A mining district since early days, the county in recent years has made

Editor's Note: Don McMillan, sage of the sage brush, cow-country philosopher, and columnist whose articles appear each week in the Paso Robles Press and Shopping News, lets his 12 year old daughter ride for him this week. Shorty, the Owl Tamer, he calls her. She writes with apologies to no one.

When Dandy fell and broke his leg,
I tell you it was hard.
To kill that faithful critter,
Who'd always been my pard.

It always sets me broodin'
Takes my spirits down a peg,
When I think I might of doctored him,
And cured that broken leg.

We was lópin' along one morning,
When the fog was all around,
Chasin' a blamed cow brute,
When Dandy left the ground,

A squealin' and a buckin',
With his ears laid back tight mean,
He seemed to lose his bearings—
Fell down a big ravine.

With his legs all twisted under him,
And his eyes a showin' white,
He couldn't make no struggle,
But he still was full of fight.

Folks may say it's sentimental bunk,
But I know it's not a lie,
When I think of the way he looked at me,
It makes me want to cry.

He knew just what was comin',
When I started to pull my gun—
Well, he died by the hand of a pal,
Who'd been with him thru trouble and fun.

I found what had caused the disaster.
It was a rattler coiled up neat,
And right beside him in the dirt,
Was the print of Dandy's feet.

Well, I couldn't bring back Dandy,
But in trying to ease the hurt,
I pounded that snake into dust
With the butt end of my quirt.

remarkable development in agriculture. Stock raising is an important industry, as well as dairying. Water is plentiful and five cuttings of alfalfa in one year are the rule. Grain, the harder fruits and vegetables are produced on a growing scale.

Hydro-electric power interests have enormous plants in the county and here is located the famous Hetch Hetchy water and power project of San Francisco. The greater portion of the Stanislaus National Forest with 1,105,000 acres lies within Tuolumne, and on the county's eastern boundary is the Yosemite National Park.

The Stanislaus National Forest offers some of the greatest scenic attractions in the State and hunters and fishermen flock there in seasons. As many as 2,000,000 trout fry have been planted in Tuolumne's streams in a single year. Thousands of motorists annually travel over the county's highways. Tourists particularly are attracted to the "ghost" mining towns made famous by Mark Twain and Bret Harte. The former's old cabin on historic Jackass Hill is owned by the county. Harte's cabin near Groveland still stands. Columbia, once one of the largest cities in California and a contender for the honor of the State's capital, now is a hamlet of about 600 population. In '49 it was a rip-roaring mining camp. The motorist may visit Poker Flat, Table Mountain, Whisky Hill and Jimtown of which Bret Harte wrote. Sonora, the county seat, is an attractive and thriving city and of late years a favorite location for Hollywood moving picture companies in the filming of western dramas. It was in the little village of Tuttletown that Mark Twain won fame as "The Sage of Jackass Hill." Big Oak Flat, Groveland, Tuolumne, Standard and Buck Meadows all are worth visiting. Population: 9271. Area: 2190 sq. miles.

Next: Ventura, Yolo and Yuba.

POULTRY HELPS.

By E. E. Steele.

I have had several inquiries the last week or two in regard to a disease of baby chicks up to two months old known as coccidiosis.

For many years it was thought that minute protozoan organisms known as coccidia, found in a large variety of birds, both domestic and wild, were all the same species, eimeria aotum. However, it has been found that there are at least six species of coccidia in chickens alone; four are disease producers and two are not.

E. mites will not seriously affect the health of the bird.

E. tenella is found in the blind guts or ceca and affects the health of the bird decidedly, producing the symptoms of coccidiosis as they are most widely known, the acute form which is often seen in baby chicks during the first few weeks of life. The coccidia bore into the wall of the gut and often produce extensive hemorrhages, bloody droppings.

Other symptoms which appear earlier than the bloody droppings are ruffled feathers and rapid wasting.

Chicks up to two months old may die suddenly and in large numbers from this form of the disease.

E. acrocolina is a serious chronic form of coccidiosis, these organisms live chiefly in the upper part of the small intestine, producing whitish or grayish spots in the wall.

Extreme emaciation or wasting of the fowls in severe cases is the principal characteristic of this form of coccidiosis.

E. maxima, another form occurs in the middle or lower part of the small intestine, producing a thickening of the wall, with a variable amount of hemorrhage, but not with the quantity of blood in the droppings as in E. tenella.

In severe cases of this type, pallor, roughening of the feathers, and diminished appetite result.

E. praecox and E. necatrix occur in the small intestine.

The latter is pathogenic and produces severe hemorrhage.

In all forms of coccidiosis the disease is spread by contamination of feed, water, and soil with the droppings of fowls and wild birds which harbor the parasites.

It has never been demonstrated that the coccidia is transmitted to the young chick in the egg.

The organisms may be carried for considerable distance in running water, in dust, on shoes, grain sacks or other objects, or may be spread by birds, flies and other insects which fly from one poultry yard to another. Rats and mice also serve to spread the disease. A single organism is capable of producing a mild form of the organism multiplying in one chick's body and considerable numbers of the parasites later being passed in the droppings, so that as a result the infection is capable of spreading to the other chicks. It is apparent, therefore that there are many ways in which a small amount of the disease producing material may be spread.

If the course of the disease has been short, as sometimes happens in the acute form, with death occurring early, there may be no visible changes in the intestines; microscopic examination of the intestinal contents will show the presence of coccidia in some stage of development, however. If the disease is of longer duration, changes will have taken place, the nature of which will depend on the species of coccidia present, as noted above.

In the acute form in which the site of infection is in the blind guts, or ceca, these organs may be enlarged and filled with blood, and in later stages the cavity of the cecum may be plugged with a thick core, a yellowish, cheesy substance with dark bloody areas.

Many treatments have been tried and advocated but none have been completely satisfactory. This may be due partly at least to the fact that there are several species of the disease.

I use a coccidiosis control mash which contains 40 per cent dry milk and I will be glad to furnish any one with the trade name of the mash.

Note—If you have any questions in regard to poultry, drop a post card to The Ocean Beach News or phone me or call at my place, visitors welcome at any time.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Reality" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon on Sunday in all branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

Among the Bible selections in the Lesson-Sermon are these verses from Matthew: "And behold, one came and said unto him, Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life? And he said unto him, Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God: but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments. . . . All these things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet? Jesus said unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come and follow me. But when the young man heard that saying, he went away sorrowful: for he had great possessions." A passage from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, states: "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for sinful beliefs to enter into the kingdom of heaven, eternal harmony. Through repentance, spiritual baptism and regeneration, mortals put off their material beliefs and false individuality."

I wondered how Helena was faring. I had handed her over to Rachel, herself again; but we had arranged no meeting and she had not so much as spoken, except to bid me good night and advise me to bar my door.

I began to see the secret of Pharaoh's success. Once it was known that to call his bluff was fatal, the man could win game after game with the acme of ease. This knowledge had become his bulwark—"Cross Pharaoh and die." His defense was attack—always. So long as life was worth living, it was not worth crossing Pharaoh, no matter how high the reward.

Some one was knocking—tapping, but not on the door.

As I started up, the sound ceased. It had come from the direction of the bathroom. Perhaps, if I waited—the tapping began again.

For a moment I stood still, listening. And then I was proving the panning close to the bathroom door. The sound came from behind the wood-work.

In rain I sought for some handle, while little bursts of tapping demanded an answer that I was not ready to give.

Suddenly I thought of the bathroom. This, like the bedroom, was paneled, and there, sure enough, a key was declaring a cupboard sunk in the wall.

The moment I opened this, I knew that some one beneath it was knocking upon its floor.

I saw the bolts of a trap which was sunk in the floor of the cupboard six feet from the door.

In an instant I had it open, there was a curling staircase of polished oak and Helena, wrapped in a dressing gown, sitting on one of the stairs. Beside her was standing Sabre, fairly snuffing excitement and ready to leap.

The sight of him made me wonder where he had been. I had not set eyes on the dog for more than two hours.

"Thank God," says Helena. "I thought you must be asleep. And now take Sabre, my dear, and tell him to watch your door. And then come down."

The watch was soon set, for Sabre was very wise, and thirty seconds later I entered my lady's room.

She pointed to a table, standing close to the hearth, laid for one only, but bearing enough for three.

"Open the wine, my darling. I'll cut the chicken up."

"We mustn't eat much," I whispered. "If we do, they'll know I've been here."

"Let them know," said Helena, quickly. "What do I care? What does it matter, John? What does anything matter now?"

I shook my head.

"This matters, Nell. Compared with this, the forester's cottage and all was a Sunday School show. Don't think I'm prudish. I'm not. I'm only too glad of a good excuse to be here. You see, I'm a man, and I love you—from throat to foot. But no one must ever know it. If we stood on the steps of a scaffold, I'd say the same."

I saw her fingers tighten about the stem of her glass.

"You're right," she said. "I'm getting my values wrong. Never mind. Sabre can cover your tracks. I'll leave a plate on the floor and they'll think I gave him a meal."

Absurdly enough, this arrangement comforted me. The fragments of propriety that remained were scarcely worth taking up, all the same.

So we broke our fast together and shared her glass.

For five minutes we smoked in silence, regarding the leaping flames. I threw down my cigarette and got to my feet.

"Interlude," I said quietly. "And now, if you please, my darling, I want you to go to bed. We've got a hard day coming and we've left a hard day behind. It's no good our talking to-night. I shall be on the ramparts at nine, but I hope that you won't appear till eleven o'clock."

She did not seem to hear me, but after a moment or two she rose to her feet.

"John," she said, "do you love me?" I caught her hand and put it up to my lips.

"You know that I love you," I said, "far more than life."

"I wonder," she said. "That's terribly easy to say."

"Why, Nell, what's the matter?" I whispered.

She shook her beautiful head.

"Nothing's the matter. I only wondered. . . . You see, I love you—blindly. There's nothing else in my world. Reputation, Yorick, Valentine—compared with you they're so many idle words. And I naturally can't help wondering whether you love me as much. It doesn't matter, you know. I neither ask nor expect it. But sometimes I wonder, my darling, whether you do."

"Give me your hands," I said, "your beautiful hands." She dropped her cigarette and gave me her other hand.

"And now your eyes," she said. She lifted her gaze to mine. "I can't define the word 'love,' but when you look troubled, Nell, it tears my heart, Pharaoh's getting at you through me—we both know that. Well, I can't curse the day I met you, but I wish to God that he'd got me at Annabel, Nell—that day when Rush jogged his arm, and he hit the mirror instead."

Her arms were about my neck, and her breath on my lips.

"No, no. Take it back. Don't say such terrible things. Oh, John, my precious, my darling." For a moment she clung to me desperately. Then she snatched a note from her pocket and thrust it into my hand. "You say you love me. Then take this note to your cousin and save me from something that frightens me more than death. You can go by the footbridge and tunnel—that key I gave to Florin was Valentine's master key. But you must go before it's light. If you're seen coming back it won't matter—because you'll be coming back."

"But, Nell, how can I? I'm on parole, my darling. We've passed our word."

"How could I help it? I was fainting. For more than a minute my head had been going round. And who have I passed it to? To a fiend—a butcher, that's trying to smash my life. And how am I breaking my word? Listen. This note's to warn your cousin that Valentine must not return. We never told Barley to keep him, so when he comes to they'll naturally let him go."

"It's taking action, Nell. You swore you wouldn't do that."

"If you love me, you'll do it, John. Call it breaking my word, if you please, and think the less of me for it—but do as I say. I haven't mentioned Pharaoh. I haven't breathed a word of the plight we're in. But if it comes out that I laid hands on my brother—well, I'll just be ruined for life. Open the note and read it. Here—give it to me."

She seized it and tore it open. "Listen to this:

"Keep Valentine with you. Use any violence you like. He must not return to the castle, and no one on earth must know that he is with you. Don't fail me."

"But why write to Geoffrey, Nell? I could tell Barley to tell him, and—"

"No, no. You don't understand. It's too serious for that. I don't think you know what I've done in abducting the Count. You must give this note to your cousin—into his hands."

"But, Nell, that's out of the question. Geoffrey won't be back till seven o'clock."

"What does that matter, John? We're free till noon." She stuffed the sheet into its envelope and thrust this again upon me. "Take it, I beg and pray you, and give it into his hand. You talk of my reputation, in this affair far more than my name is at stake. If they knew what I'd done, my own servants would use me as a leper; they all took the oath that I took, and it's never been broken. John, since Yorick was built. I had to do it, John—you know that I had; but if anyone ever finds out, there's an end of me."

"Pharaoh knows, my darling."

"What can he prove? Nothing. But if Valentine and he get together, I haven't a chance. And Pharaoh would be on to Mona within the hour."

"All right," I said, "I'll take it. But—"

"Thank God, my darling." She threw herself into my arms. "Now I do know that you love me. Don't think I don't know what I'm asking."

She brushed my cheek with her lips and threw back her head. "Ask what you like of me after—I'll give it with all my heart. We'll live or die together—just as you say. But we're going to live—I know it."

"God help me," said I. "I'll do it. But why I must wait for Geoffrey—why, I must stand and watch while he reads your note—"

"To bring me back his promise. Until I know that he's read it, I shan't know a moment's peace. Oh, John, my dear, I've got so much to carry."

"Very well, my beauty. I'll go at once."

I hastened back to my bedroom and dressed as fast as I could. Gingly feeling my wound, I remembered Helena's promise to send a horse for me to the mouth of the entrance drive. She had, of course, no idea that Dewdrop had stabbed me so deep. Perhaps if I stood in my stirrups—

Before I left the chamber, I drew the bolts of the door. Then I took Sabre and made for the polished stair.

Twenty minutes later I fought my way out of the bushes that were masking the tunnel's mouth.

Something at least I was spared, for Geoffrey drove up to the inn five minutes before his time.

I saw her fingers tighten about the stem of her glass.

"Well, I'm damned," he said. "And where the deuce have you been?" "I'll tell you later," said I, and put the note into his hand. "And now come out of that car. I've got to get back."

"Get back where?" said Geoffrey. "I'll tell you later," said I. "You read that note."

My cousin stared. Then he drew out the sheet of paper and read the message it bore. When he had done, he looked me full in the eye.

"You shouldn't have opened it, should you?"

It was my turn to stare.

"As a matter of fact, I didn't. She sealed it before I came down—in. Then she broke it open and read it to me herself."

Geoffrey fingered his chin.

"Well, you can't go like this," he said, getting out of the car. "I mean—" "Geoffrey," I said, "believe me, I must get back. I'll get into touch again as soon as ever I can, but, however strange you find it, I can't wait now."

"Only one moment," said Geoffrey, taking my arm.

Despite my protests he haled me up the steps and into the inn.

In the hall I planted my feet.

"Look here, Geoffrey," I said. "I don't want to have a row, but I've got to get back to her without one instant's delay. I wouldn't have dreamed of coming, but she couldn't send a servant and—well, there was no other way. I'd have left the note with Barley, but she wouldn't have that. She's got to know that you've got it and have promised to do as she says."

"Oh, well, here goes," said Geoffrey, and hit me under the jaw as hard as he could.

CHAPTER IX

The Fragrant Valley

When I came to my senses, I was lying on the floor of a car that was traveling fast. My wrists and my ankles were bound and my mouth was gagged. Barley was seated above me, watching my face.

As I tried to sit up, he pushed me back on the pillows which made my bed.

"Lie quiet a bit, sir," he said, "and you'll soon be as right as rain."

To this day I do not know why I did not go out of my mind.

They say that I fought like a madman, but that was because I was mad. Barley had to throw himself on me, to keep me down. And then at last I fainted.

I do not think Barley knew it, for my senses had hardly left me before they returned; but I think that discretion came with them, for then I saw that to struggle and fight was hopeless. And so, to feign resignation, I lay quite still where I was and shut my eyes. And that was my undoing, for after a moment or two I fell asleep.

Though the car fled on, I knew nothing, and I never knew when it stopped. I was lifted out, still sleeping, and though my bonds were loosened, I never stirred.

And while I slept, Lady Helena Yorick was playing her part.

The song of a brook woke me, and I propped myself on an elbow to gather my wits.

The next instant I was afoot and was staring wildly about me. . . . The wooded peak of a mountain looked placidly back—and a pride of beeches was smiling and a chapter of gray-green rocks was casting its stately shadow upon the most vivid of swarms.

It was half-past four. I had slept for more than nine hours.

The dial of my watch grew misty. I felt the tears beginning to leave my eyes. One of them fell upon the dial. So I stood for a moment.

Then I flung myself down and buried my face in the grass.

"Come, come, old fellow," said Geoffrey, "you mustn't take it so ill."

I made no answer. I dared not trust my voice.

"You'd have done the same," said my cousin. "John, I couldn't ignore such a hint."

I sat up and dashed the tears from my face.

"Hint? What hint?"

Geoffrey raised his eyebrows.

"I don't know what she read you," he said. "But I don't think she read you that."

As he spoke, he gave me a paper—Helena's note.

Mr. Bohun:

Keep John with you. Use any violence you like. He must not return to the castle and no one on earth must know that he is with you. Don't fail me.

Helena Yorick.

"No," I said, "you're quite right. She didn't read that." I laughed shortly.

"You'd have seen through it, of course; nine out of ten people would. But you must remember that I'm no ordinary fool. Besides, I trusted her blindly—trusted and loved her blindly. So you see it was awfully easy to have fun on."

I laughed again. "It's rather like fooling a dog or a baby child. A dog, I think. Your dog. You've decided to have him destroyed so you take him out for a walk and stop at the vet's. He doesn't know. He doesn't care where you go, so long as he can go with you—he with his dog. He loves you blindly, you see. He's not the faintest idea that you're going to do him in. You can speak to the vet. In his presence—I want this dog destroyed. You're perfectly safe. He'll lick your hand while you're speaking, if only you'll give him the chance."

. . . But if—that dog's eyes—were opened. . . . If when you were gone and he was standing, waiting, with his eager nose to the threshold, straining his ears for some signal of your return—if then by some magic that dog was made aware of the fact. . . .

Nipponese Typists Have but 2,000 Characters to Master

The Nipponese manipulators of typewriters have to struggle with a keyboard of 2,000 characters to be picked out by hand. The slugs have individual compartments in a sliding tray. The stenographer must press a knob in picking out these individual signs of the Katakana Hiragana forms.

Characters which once were pictured have been reduced to their simplest forms on the typewriter and now represent ideas only when placed in sound and thought sequence. When the knob is moved directly over the selected character, pressure is exerted. A metal arm pushes across a tiny ink roller and against the paper which is rolled on a drum. The drum shifts and revolves as the letter progresses.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Pawning Wives Great Idea Till Mates Want 'Em Back

Husbands of Peiping, China, who thought the idea of pawning their wives a great one, now are appealing to the police to get their mates back. They say that when they were ready to repay the loan they could not redeem the wives. The trouble is not with the lenders, but with the women themselves who refuse to return to their erstwhile husbands on a variety of pretexts. Above all, they accuse their husbands of harboring the design of sending them to Manchukuo next, and state that, although they are prepared for everything in reason, that is a step to which as patriotic Chinese women they can never agree. There is no law dealing with this particular form of pawn-broking.

CHARGE PUZZLES FILM

COMEDIAN; TO APPEAR HERE

(San Diego Union)
Al St. John, film comedian, has been ordered to appear in San Diego township court April 1 to answer to a charge of failure to provide preferred against him by his former wife, Marion.

Mrs. St. John charges that her former husband has failed to provide money for the support of his daughter, Mary Jane, 17.

"I've played in plenty of comedies but this is the first mystery I've appeared in," The Associated Press reports the puzzled comedian as stating when he appeared in Los Angeles municipal court to post $250 bond to assure his appearance here April 1.

"Mary Jane," he is quoted "has been residing with me for the past year and why I should be charged with failing to provide for her certainly has me puzzled." The St. Johns were divorced 15 years ago. Mrs. St. John formerly resided at 4960 Brighton avenue, Ocean Beach, according to reports at the sheriff's office.

ALL WOULD BE WELL IF EVERY KID WAS "FULL OF PRUNES"

When one kid tells another, "You're full of prunes," he is paying that youngster an unwitting compliment. He might have phrased the same idea, but wouldn't of course, by saying, "You're full of nourishment."

The United States department of agriculture is so appreciative of the eating of prunes that it would like every kid to be full of them.

Nearly 400 million pounds of this dried fruit are marketed every year. Last year California supplied the world's market with 243 million pounds, according to a bulletin issued by the California Chain Stores association.

Because the nourishment value of prunes is high and because the growers are dependent on the adequate movement of this year's bumper crop for the maintenance of a market balance, member organizations of the Chain Stores association are pushing the sale of this energy building food.

Those concerned with the profitable movement of the prune growers' crop are stressing the value of this fruit by calling attention to the health-building properties of the vitamins A, B and G it contains.
